Gerster to-night.

The Salt Lake Easel is no more. The HERALD weather fiend is a venomous deceiver.

Will He, now will He, on reflection, veto the appropriation bill?

Probably Mrs. Clayton has gone in search of those missing papers.

Next week winds up the Legislative bobbin. The delegation are getting hungry.

There is a generally expressed desire to see Miss Seguin in the "Bohemian Girl."

At the hour of closing last evening the sales for to-night's opera amounted to $2,380.

The box office at the Opera House, for the sale of Abbott tickets, will be open this morning at 10 o'clock.

A jury was drawn in the Biddlecome murder case yesterday afternoon, in the District court.

There are two heart-broken young men in THE HERALD office, and all on account of Kate Homer.

Mrs. Kate Homer Clayton has left us without a word of explanation or warning. Several people in the city (business men, mainly) sincerely regret her departure.

In the District Court yesterday, John Leland was convicted on the charge of assault with intent to commit rape. The jury recommended mercy.

A sparring match for the Police Gazette medal recently sent to Salt Lake, will soon take place. The date will be announced in time to give the "fancy" a chance to be present.

L. Goldberg, "the clothier of the Wasatch," has a local announcement in this issue, in which many of the goods carried by him are named. See it, and then see Goldberg.

The rainfall last night was the heaviest in Ogden that there has been for three years, at least it poured into cellars to the depth of three or four inches, that have been as powder for that length of time.

It is understood that the Mammoth Mining company is trying again to effect a compromise with the many creditors of the concern. The present offer is said to be one share of the company's stock for $5 of indebtedness.

R. C. Chambers, superintendent of the famous Ontario mine, of Utah, has examined the Ansonda mine and pronounced it the most wonderful mine he has ever seen. He has never seen the Drum Lumston.—Helena Independent.

There is a great deal of interest being taken in the coming appointments. If the President would only hurry—but then the new appointee, even if nominated and confirmed immediately, would not arrive here in time to save the appropriation bill.

It is expected that full dress will prevail down stairs at the opera to-night; ladies will either go with heads uncovered or with small open bonnets, and gentlemen will appear in the regulation swallow-tail or Prince Albert coats, with white neckties, etc.

Scene, Theatre box office. Young gentlemen from the Sixth Ward—I want a ticket for the Opera to-morrow night. How much?

Ticket seller—Five dollars.

Y. g. f. t. S. W.—I only want a seat for one night—not for a whole week.

T. S.—Well, that's the price.

Y. g. f. t. S. W.—Guess I'll have to mold a few more dobbies before I can stand that much for one night. And he departed southward in a brown study, muttering to himself, "Five dollars—don't think there's so much money in the sixth Ward."

Wines, Liquors and Cigars: We are prepared to sell to families at the "Occidental" Pure California and Imported Wines at reduced prices. The best of Liquors and Cigars always on hand. You will become convinced by a trial.

GERSTER AND PATTI.

Mapleson's Singing Birds Arrive in Mann Boudoir Cages.

A Pleasant Chat with Gerster, And a General Description of All that Could be Seen.

The intelligence that Her Majesty's company would not reach Ogden till a late hour last evening and that it would be near midnight before they arrived in this city, did not deter a HERALD reporter from boarding yesterday evening's north-bound train for the purpose of meeting the distinguished people expected over the Union Pacific.

Mapleson's elegant special train rolled into the depot shortly after our reporter's arrival, and it was not long before he made his way to the platform of the front passenger coach on the train. Opening the door to pass through, he found his way impeded by a group of dusky Italians (the chorus), who were watching others of their number in a game of cards. From these groups arose the deafening noise usually caused by everybody talking at the same time, and in their immediate neighborhood the atmosphere was blue with the smoke which ascended from the lips and cigarettes of the players, every individual singer held a cigarette, and even the ladies in the groups puffed with graceful abandon, and sent the smoke curling through the air quite as merrily as the male choristers. A similar scene was noticeable in the second car, while in the third, which was a Pullman coach, many of the orchestra were jolling, some playing "sixty-six," others eating sandwiches and drinking beer, both of which had been procured from the station. The fourth and fifth cars were the celebrated Mann boudoir coaches; upon these two cars have been bestowed the names "Sommambula" (aptly christened) and "Travita." Here were found many of the principal artists of the company, either chatting busily in their rooms, shuffling the cards, or partaking of an elegant supper, furnished from the buffet at one end of the car. The busy figures of waiters fitted to and fro, being summoned from table to table by the sound of an electric bell, with which every room is provided. A more comfortable scene than this car presented could not well be imagined; the staterooms are built across the car, and the sofa is transformed at night into a bed, or rather two beds, an upper and lower berth, by simply lifting the sofa back at right angles, the head in the centre of the car with the feet to the window. Should privacy be desired it can be secured simply by reaching out your hand and turning the key in the lock. All the upholstery is in elegant style, and the ceilings and sides of each room are covered with stamped leather, showing antique figures in relief. The names of some of the people in these cars are as follows: Signor J. Angelo, Mme. Angelo, Signor Cherubini, Signor Giovanni, Madame Sacconi, Madame Valera, Signor Anton, Madame Bianchi Florio, George W. Parry, stage manager; Signor Arditi, musical director; Signor Gallassi, Madame Gallassi, Signor Vicini, Madame Vicini, Signor Lombardelli, Madame Lombardelli, Signor Bello, Signor Belasco, Signor Caracciolo, Signor Vascetti and Mr. Gahan, the private secretary to Colonel Mapleson.

As our reporter entered the following car his ears were saluted with a ringing voice (afterwards found to belong to Mlle. Dotti), exclaiming, "Three kings," from which he inferred that the poker game reigned as much a favorite as elsewhere on the train. The first compartment in this car belongs to Mme. Etelka Gerster and her husband, Signor Gardini; in the next Mlle. Dotti and some railroad officials were playing at the classic game of poker, and in the farther end of the car Colonel Mapleson, manager of this great enterprise, was found buried in telegrams and letters which had been handed him on his arrival at the station in Ogden.

"Always glad to see newspaper men. Where do they come from? They come from the clouds, from under the ground, from every niche and corner! They are omnipresent. Glad again to see you," and he warmly shook the scribe's right hand. I suppose that you want some news. Well, we have had a magnificent trip so far! A regular holiday—the newspaper men made it pleasant for everybody in the company. Sit down, and have a glass of Apollinaris. Here you are; drink hearty! What are they doing in Salt Lake City? Is the sale as good as reported?"

Our reporter stated the figures. "Capital! Thank you, my boy; as for that we are doing well everywhere. Gerster never fails to draw big audiences. She is a mint—a regular what do you call that mine in this neighborhood? Well, never mind. I have known people to wither away under a load of sorrow and disappointment for having missed the chance to hear her. But you want to be introduced to her, so I'll leave you together," and turning to Madame Gerster the Colonel spoke a few complimentary words of introduction and passed to another compartment, leaving our reporter alone in the presence of one of the greatest artists of our times. It would take too much space, and might prove tedious to our readers, where we to give a detailed report of all that passed between Madame Gerster and our reporter while the train was running towards this city; the following compressed account will convey an idea of what information the newspaper man gained in the course of the conversation.

Madame Etelka Gerster has nearly completed her 30th year, and is now on her second professional visit to the United States. She did not intend in her youth to become an opera singer, but her genius being so evident she was constrained to follow the profession by the advice of many friends. She has been married for some years to Dr. Carlo Gardini, one of the first gentlemen of Italy, and consul general from the United States; together they own a splendid villa near Bologna, where five months of every year are regularly passed. One child has been born to Madame Gerster, a girl now about two years old; the little daughter does not accompany her celebrated mother in her professional travels, but is left in the care of a trusted nurse in New York. Gerster is in constant receipt of telegrams, however, apprising her of the health of little Linda, and she is never so anxious as when approaching a station on the road, lest there should be no telegram awaiting her stating how mademoiselle has passed the night. It is this same infant which gave rise to the rumors in Baltimore concerning Gerster's desertion of Mapleson, whereas she had only been summoned to New York by the intelligence that her darling was ailing. On this topic, however, the reporter did not touch. Madame Gerster chatted pleasantly for an hour in reference to people and things, declaring that she anticipated with much expectancy her first trip to the coast. Madame Gerster is a delightful conversationalist, with a rather attractive foreign accent. She speaks German, Hungarian, Italian, French, Russian and other languages fluently. She has a charming face, which lights up with a kindly expression when she engages in animated conversation. She is rather robust, and apparently enjoys the very best of health. Her manners are quiet but affable, and there is a dignity about her which commands the hands of her associates the respect that is bestowed upon the true woman. Lucia is her favorite opera, because it gives her an opportunity to develop all the beauties of her voice and method. She anticipates great pleasure, she stated, in singing the opera before a Salt Lake audience this evening.

It had been arranged that upon the arrival of the train in this city the notables would be driven to Walker House and Continental Hotel, while the humbler members of the party would foot it to lodgings of less pretension; but the train being delayed until after midnight, all remained in the cars.

The Mann boudoir cars are accompanied by Lieutenant Count Zacharoff, who is a large stockholder in the company. The count is aide-de-camp to the Czar of Russia and the possessor of the four black diamonds that played a celebrated part in the Russo-Turkish war.

Mme. Patti and Signor Nicolini who occupied the last car, named after the great artist, were not visible. It is said that the car cost $60,000, and will be worth a visit. Mme. Patti is on her way to San Francisco, and will only stop over long enough to see the sights.

"Whims."

Says the Santa Barbara Republic in relation to this performance:

"Never has Lobero's Theatre been filled with a larger, more select and jollier crowd than that which witnessed the Whims Comedy Company last night. The performance is one long laugh from first to last, and when the ballet appeared the merriment reached such a height that it strained the adobe in the sides of the building. Raymond Holmes has a keen sense of the ludicrous and has adopted a role in which he shines out a star of unlimited magnitude. His company are jolly and overflowing with fun. Sam C. Mott deserves the thanks of the theatre-going people for bringing such a troupe to the city. It may be said without fear of contradiction, that no theatrical visitors to this city, have ever equaled them. The music was bright, sparkling and rendered in first class style and the costumes very elaborate."

SALT LAKE THEATRE.

The New and Handsome Decorations.

The interior ornamentation of the Salt Lake Theatre is being done with good taste and excellent materials, which will make an almost complete metamorphosis in the aspect of the building. The paper used for the walls is a rich lin-crusted paper, a different shade and trimming being adopted for each story. The ground floor is a superb old gold, separated at intervals corresponding with the columns of support, by panels of red and black framed in gilt bamboo rods.

New carpets are being laid in the aisles, and a large force, under the direction of Manager Clawson, is rushing the improvements, in order to get as much as possible done in time for the opera to-night.

The house has been thoroughly cleaned from top to bottom, and everything done to insure the comfort of the theatre-going public. When the present plans are completed the Salt Lake Theatre will be without a rival for comfort and beauty in the west.

PERSONAL POINTS.

B. W. Driggs, of Pleasant Grove, is in town.

Mrs. Kate Homer Clayton is not in Salt Lake at present.

Eli H. Murray, Esq., of Kentucky, was in Salt Lake yesterday.

Mr. George W. Driver, of the firm of Driver & Son, Ogden, came to headquarters yesterday.

S. C. Ewing, Esq., the genial proprietor of the Clift House, leaves this morning for the east, over the Denver & Rio Grande. The gentleman goes to visit the scenes of his childhood—"the old home."

The Craze.

During the next sixty days, says the Missoula (Montana) Times, we expect to read of many discouraging reports from the Cour d'Alene, and to hear dissatisfaction expressed of the whole country in general. We expect this, not through any fault of the mines known to exist there, but because miners and prospectors are rushing to the new diggings too soon. As much is known here regarding the richness and extent of the new fields as at Eagle City, and all must be aware that nothing in the way of prospecting or mining can be done there now. The whole layer of country is covered with snow several feet in depth and mining cannot be commenced until spring.

We Protest.

Governor Murray is now being abused by the Mormons because he refuses to let them use public funds for the University. The Mormons insist on using the funds, but refuse to let the Governor appoint the regents according to law. That is where the Governor has the polygamists on the hip. They must either make the University non-sectarian or they cannot get the school funds.—Denver Inter-Ocean.

Just point out the man or men that have dared to abuse the Governor. THE HERALD wants to see such persons, in order that it may have an opportunity to ridicule them. Nobody shall abuse him if we can help it. If there is one man among ten thousand entitled to especial prominence and respect, it is He who overcomes majorities and defeats the payment of public obligations by a stroke of the pen.

Later On.

Owing to circumstances over which there was no control, the proposed trip of Mr. Phil Margetts, Miss A. A. Adams, et al., to the cities and towns of Utah county has been postponed until the 15th proximo. On that date the company will leave this city and at American Fork, Provo, Springville, Spanish Fork and Payson will play pieces in which Mr. Margetts and Miss Adams will enact leading roles and give our southern neighbors entertainments which will long be remembered.

FISHY.

A Letter From Baird About Carp.

The Hon. John T. Cane writes me from Washington on this subject as follows: "You have made inquiries several times about carp, and being much interested in the matter I wrote to the Commissioner informing him of the great interest in fish culture which has been awakened in Utah, and asked him when the next distribution would be made, to which I received in reply the enclosed letter which speaks for itself and which I think should be published for the information of all those concerned in the next distribution."

HON. JOHN T. CAINE,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

The next distribution of carp to Utah will be made in the ensuing fall or winter. I regret greatly to hear of the failure, in some cases, of parties to receive their fish, through circumstances beyond our control. The distribution of this fish from Washington to points so remote is a matter of difficulty; and, until the recent improvements in our arrangements for distribution, was impossible. Some cases of failure must necessarily occur, but every precaution is taken to render them as few as possible.

Very truly yours,

S. F. BAIRD,

Commissioner.

I have thirty-seven applicants on file asking for fish at the next distribution. Should there be others who desire to engage in domestic carp farming they can send their names and addresses in full to me and I will enter them in the list of new applicants.

Territorial papers please copy.

A. MILTON MUSKER.

Emma Abbott.

Of this famous and fascinating prima donna, the Toronto Globe has the following to say: "Emma Abbott is indeed all that a prima donna should be. Besides being very pretty and graceful, she is a most accomplished actress, and she possesses a voice of wondrous sweetness and purity with sufficient compass to accomplish all that is required of it without any painful or even apparent effort. Her voice also has all that marvelous flexibility that is born of thorough culture, but even this does not express the peculiar charm of her singing and acting. There is a spontaneity about it that would make one think she could not act without singing nor sing without acting. The two are so harmoniously blended that one is at a loss to know where the one leaves off and the other begins. There is melody in every line she utters and expressive motive in every note."

An Ogden "Hero."

The unblushing "Hero" of a thousand lies and diurnal mangle of King's English, makes a supremely ridiculous effort in this morning's Tribune to maintain his asinine self and his chronic propensity to lie. Some time ago the Pilot, and others through it, sought to infuse a little veracity into him. But the attempt was abandoned when it became apparent that no provision had been made by nature for its reception, when the dame threw his hermaphrodite composition together in a fit of disgust. Regarding his strictures on the Herald editor, while it's no funeral of ours, we have only to add that "Hero" hasn't "git-up" enough in him to get drunk and make a man of himself for once.—Pilot.

Their First.

The amateur quadrille band, of the Eighteenth Ward, composed of Messrs. Toronto, Thomason, Evans, Whitney and Sharp, gave their first social ball last evening in the Eighteenth Ward schoolhouse. The band, during the afternoon, had furnished the music for the Sunday school party, which proved a very enjoyable success. The young gentlemen, who have been together as a band only a very short time, delighted their friends last evening with a class of music which compares very favorably with the best efforts of more than one of the older musical organizations.

The delegation—but, however, they object to it.

The masquerade announced to take place at the Pavilion yesterday evening did not come off. The usual amusements went ahead, however, and there was a large number of spectators.

Phosa McAllister and her company close their engagement at the Opera House yesterday evening, in "Leah." There was a small attendance. The appearances of this company have been rather unfortunate in most respects.

Home talent will perform at the Opera House on the 4th and 5th of April, led by the popular favorite, Miss A. A. Adams. "Her Amber Witch" and "The Two Orphans" will be the pieces, both well calculated to draw crowded houses.

The Whisky Men.

Chicago, 8.—It is learned that a private meeting of the executive committee of the Western Export Association, controlling all distilleries in the west, was held here today, at which it was understood that a decision was reached to reduce the production of whisky 10 per cent. below the present basis after May 1st. The committee, which had returned from Cincinnati, reported that distillers there had suffered to the extent of $45,000, and it was decided to levy a tax of 5 cents per bushel on the capacity of other members, for the purpose of making the losses good.
